

P A U S E I N T E R I O R

How We'll Build It

Turning a beautiful brand into a thriving online business.

Our approach to building pauseinterior.se

Prepared for the founder & her team · June 2026

The same hands-on, end-to-end approach behind Vastelasten.app

The opportunity in one page

Pause Interior already has the hardest part: a beautiful product, real taste, and a genuine story. What it needs now is a business built around it.

Pause Interior is a Swedish interior brand built on a single, powerful idea — the pause: the moment you walk through your front door and your shoulders drop. Natural materials, timeless design, made to last. In a world of loud, disposable "fast interior", this is exactly the calm that more and more people are looking for.

Three things make this the right moment:

- "Swedish design" sells calm and quality before a word is read — instant, free credibility.
- People are spending on a calmer home — slow living and natural materials are a lasting shift, not a fad.
- A small brand can now reach the world directly online — if the brand and the marketing are done right.

The goal is simple: build a beautiful, professional online brand and a marketing engine that grows on its own — so the business compounds month after month, instead of starting from zero every time.

Our approach — build the machine around her

The founder stays close to what she does best: the product, the taste, the Swedish story. We build everything around her — and then hand her a system she can run.

She brings

- The collection & the craft
- Her taste and aesthetic
- The authentic founder story
- The relationship with customers

We build

- Strategy, structure & finances
- A consistent brand & a professional store
- The online-marketing engine
- Measurement, then training & handover

The principle that makes it work

Build owned assets that compound. Rent attention only to feed them.

Most small brands pour money into ads and disappear the day they stop. We do the opposite: every month we grow an owned audience — an email list, a library of content, and a small community — that keeps selling for years. Paid ads are fuel, not the engine. This is how a small, founder-led brand grows without burning cash.

In one line: we build the machine; she gives it its soul.

What we'll actually build

Four concrete things, each one feeding the next:

#	We build...	So that...
1	A clear brand — voice, colours, type, and above all photography direction	everything feels like one calm, premium brand, everywhere
2	A professional online store (Shopify) — fast, beautiful, easy to buy from	visitors feel the calm in 5 seconds and can buy in under 5 clicks
3	A marketing engine — email, Pinterest, Instagram, and a journal/blog	new people discover the brand and keep coming back, month after month
4	A simple dashboard — five numbers, every week	decisions are driven by data, not guesswork

The single most important first asset

For an interior brand sold online, photography is the product experience. The first real investment is a proper photo and video shoot of the core collection — natural light, real rooms, texture you can almost feel. The website, the ads, the emails, and the social posts all draw from it for years.

The plan — four phases

Phase	When	What we do	What she does
0 • Foundation	Weeks 0–2	Lock the plan, confirm the details, choose the platform & tools	Answer the key questions; share products, prices, story, assets
1 • Build & launch	Months 1–3	Build the store, set up email & tracking, publish the story, soft launch	Core-collection photo/video shoot; product details; first customers & reviews
2 • Grow	Months 3–9	Run the content & marketing engine, scale what works, add a styling service	Create products & content in her voice; serve customers
3 • Expand & hand over	Months 9–18	Trade/B2B, a membership, select stockists; document & train	Own the day-to-day of the brand she now runs

Guiding principle: do less, better, sooner. We launch a small store that is excellent, not a big one that is average — then let it compound.

The first 90 days at a glance

- 1 Month 1 — Foundation & soft launch. Photo/video shoot of the core collection. Build/upgrade the store. Set up the email engine and tracking. Soft launch to a warm circle and gather the first orders and reviews.
- 2 Month 2 — Grow the audience. Public launch with the founder's story. Turn on the content engine (one idea every two weeks → article + social + newsletter). Start Pinterest & Instagram. Reach out to a few taste-aligned voices.
- 3 Month 3 — Optimise & scale. Double down on the channel that works. Improve the website where people drop off. Launch a first gifting bundle. Begin small, profitable advertising. Plan the styling service.

What we measure (the only 5 numbers that matter early): email sign-ups · website visitors · conversion rate · revenue · repeat-purchase rate. Everything else is noise for now.

What we need from her to start

This plan becomes a real, specific plan the moment we have a few answers. A short working session covers it:

- ☐ Her story — why she started Pause; what "pause" means to her
- ☐ The collection — products, materials, and prices
- ☐ How it's made — her own designs, curated pieces, or a mix
- ☐ The numbers — rough margins and any current sales
- ☐ The reach — where she wants to sell (Sweden, the Nordics, EU, wider)
- ☐ Existing assets — logo, photos, the current website & platform
- ☐ Time & budget — what she can give, and her goal for the first year

The very first step

A relaxed working session to answer the questions above, confirm the platform, and book the core-collection photo shoot — the one asset everything else is built on.

This is an approach document, not a fixed contract. The exact catalogue, prices, and assets of pauseinterior.se are to be confirmed together; everything else is grounded in the brand's consistent positioning — Swedish interior, natural materials, timeless design, sustainable production, and the feeling of coming home: a pause. · Pause Interior — How We'll Build It · June 2026